All the more reason that they should felt like leaven in the lump. For the future will depend on them. This means that the individual members of the Church, men and women, boys and girls, must do the work. Not the preaching or the ministry of the elegry by Riself but the personal effort and witness of our laity, man by man, woman by woman is the pressing need of this crisis and the keynote of the campaign. We in the Church have been caught unawares. Most of us have been really on watch, or used and regulations has some the existing law on the subblikation of the whole force of the Christian church, in prayer, in sactifice, in thought, in money and in lives.

And nobedy knows of the marked four national history, our own communion has been given a peculiarly important place of leadership. Those who were charged with the molding of the new nation were for the most part our members. They wrete into our great matical documents and formularies. The same thing has been true all through our history. The country trusts us and looks to us. We have not failed it yet, and we shall not now. We must assert the leadership which properly belongs to us Pennsylvania. We must assert the leadership which properly belongs to us. Here the nation was born. Here the American church first worked out its full organization. Here then, more than elsewhere, our people must be ready to be put to the proof. I am quite confident they will not fail. With all the earnestness at my command, I call them to go forward and to show how effectively an aroused Church can put forth its whole strength for the kingdom of God and for the safety and blessing of the nation."
